of this evil has begun an obstacle to suburban building has been interposed by the fact that no one could tell where his house could safely be built, so that a street would run in front of it instead of cutting through it. Every month of delayed action aggravates both branches of this evil. In the end, with modifications rendered necessary by topographical conditions, the street plan of the original city must be extended over the whole District. It is not necessary to open immediately these new streets, but as soon as possible the lines should be definitely and authoritatively laid down, to which suburban building can safely be adapted.

efforts which practical philanthropists are making to discover the causes of crime and pauperism and to remedy the mischievous conditions which now prevail to such an alarming extent. Hidden away to a considerable degree in the great mass of figures which came into being through the operations of the eleventh census are facts that should shock every good citizen. With all the warmth of eulogy the story of wonderful progress has been told again and again, but only a few references have been made to the abnormal growth of what may be termed the criminal class. Forty years ago there was but one criminal to 3,500 good or reasonably good citizens. In 1890 the proportion was one in 786.5; an increase of 445 per cent in a period during which the population increased but 170 per cent. Never in the nation's history has educative work of all deriptions been nearly so active as for ten years past, yet in that time the increase in the numof those who were confined in penitentiaries and jails and reformatory institutions was almost twice as rapid as the speed of populative growth. Comparisons with conditions in Great britain are far from encouraging, for there the number of criminal convictions has decreased victions in England have fallen from 15,038 in 1868 to 9,348 in 1889, in Scotland from 2,940 to 1,723 for the same years, and in Ireland from 3,084 in 1870 to 1,225 in 1890. That such improvement is due to the innate goodness of the British character is an improbable conclusion which some British statisticians have hastily reached; much of the betterment really resulted from wholesale migration of the least desirable classes to British colonies and to the the city. There is no need to deny yourself the "comforts of a home" simply because you have not the ready cash. Although we are not an installment house we will accommodate responsible parties with credit. We accommodate with a kind of credit that is radically different from that characterising ordinary installment houses. We do not charge the credit purchaser a single cent more than the cash purchaser; no notes to sign, no cash purchaser; no notes to sign, no interest to pay, and no legal technicalities. Four word is taken as your bond.

Why not let us lighten the burder why not let us lighten the burden of furnishing your house this spring by a little of our genuine accommodation? We can show you a more magnificent and varied stock of house-furnishings than any other establishment in Washington.

A look at our stock won't hurt it even if you don't buy, and you may be able to get some valuable hints about furnishing your home.

OOR RICHARD SAYS: "OB SERVE ALL MEN; THY-SELF MOST," and we think SELF MOST," and we think it is a wonderfully good maxim. In the manufacture of "Ceres" Flour we have campally observed the futile and feeble attempts of rival brands to supplent it in the public estimation, but we have invariably "soid seth-need seed." We have always bent our best energies to keeping up the high standard of purity and fluences for which

-is famous, relying on the old rule that the best of anything must inevitably conquer in the long run. Our confidence was not misplaced, for "Ceres" has conquered, and it now commands of the respect and favor of thousands of the best housekeepers in the country, and especially in Washington.

"Ceres" Flour has more life-giving pourishment than any other brand in nourishment than any other brand in the world A trial always commerce! All housekeepers who use "Cerus" say it makes "more" bread, "lighter" bread, bread, "bread bread and "better" bread than any other Flour and "better" bread than any other Flour in the world.

Be sure you buy the genuine and not an imitation. Every sack and barrel of the genuine "Geres" contains a circular signed in autograph by Wis. M. Gall & Co. and bearing the imprint of two gold medals. LOOK FOR IT:
